

Hi. I'm Alexis.

ASSISTANT VICE PRESIDENT, TREATY BROKING,
SEATTLE

ALL ABOUT ME

I graduated from Rollins College in 2011 with a B.A. in Economics and a minor in International Business. Prior to graduating, I had three internships that helped prepare me for my current role:

- Marketing & Donor Relations Intern at the Orlando Museum of Art
- Marketing & Sales Intern at Coverpoint LLC (a technology company that specializes in creating customized online platforms for insurance companies)
- Risk Analyst Intern at Guy Carpenter.

MY ROLE ASPIRATIONS

I wear many different hats day-to-day. While my primary focuses are servicing existing clients and onboarding new ones, there are many specific job functions that make each day a unique challenge. My role affords me a high degree of visibility, both within Guy Carpenter and externally with clients, prospects, and business partners. As I continue to develop and learn all that I can about the wide world of reinsurance, I aspire to gain even more responsibility on my client accounts and take on leadership opportunities that will help expand our business.

WHY I CHOSE (RE)INSURANCE

I was drawn to reinsurance because I found my internship challenging and stimulating. Reinsurance broking centers around problem solving, listening to clients' needs and finding the best solutions available in the market. This field also provides an outlet for my creativity, through innovating new solutions or inventing new ways to present complex information. Reinsurance broking requires a high degree of teamwork, but that collaboration is well balanced with project autonomy that allows me to showcase my individuality.

WHAT SURPRISED ME MOST?

For a relatively unknown industry, I was surprised by the complexity of reinsurance and its application to virtually all aspects of human enterprise. I have learned that reinsurance is more than just traditional catastrophe management -- it lends itself to financial consulting, operational excellence, and the formation of new industries. The backgrounds of my colleagues are similarly diverse, as it takes a broad range of skillsets to keep up with this constantly evolving business. I know that my career in reinsurance will continue to create opportunities for learning for many years to come!
