2023 State of Flood Report

The way to flood resilience

As one of the world's most frequent and devastating perils, flood is indiscriminate in the damage it does to communities. Floods are increasing in quantity and severity which means compounding risk. Thus, it's essential to plan for the future of floods.

The power of public and private partnerships

Working together, the public and private sectors can speed recovery following flood events and increase communities' resilience to future risks.

Natural catastrophes feeding flood

The industry, led by Torrent and Marsh, is taking steps to close the protection gap, mitigate flood risk, and promote resilience. We see five core areas as priorities for achieving these goals:

Torrent is hyper-focused on the following actions to help pave the way to resilience:
